Navy Improves Underseas Fighting Gear; Secretary Tells Manpower Plans, Needs

The threat of Russia's growing underseas fleet—now almost four times larger than the U.S. submarine force—is being countered by the United States Navy with powerful new underseas weapons and range detectors. Navy Secretary

Charles S. Thomas dis-closed this week in an exclusive JOURNAL interview that the U.S. Navy has tripled the range at which it can detect enemy submarines submarine weapons and given them added "destruction potential."

Discussing the present roles and missions of the Navy, Secretary Thomas said our world-wide commitments have "placed a heavy burden on the operating forces," and created a "pressing problem" with relation to the maintenance of our ships. As a result, he said, the U. S. Navy is operating at a tempo "unequalled except in war."

Mr. Thomas told of the Navy's "diffi-culty" in getting enough highly skilled technicians. He said about 12 ratings will be below par by the end of June. Furthermore, he notes, the revolutionary adthermore, he notes, the revolutionary advances in nuclear propulsion and guided missiles will increase the need for technicians. (The Defense Department has indicated that it will go before Congress next year with a proposal to boost the pay of Service technicians.)

The Secretary also discussed some of the Navy's current personnel problems. Here are the highlights:

OCS quotas will be almost doubled during the next 18 months.

The Navy may have to resort to the

"The Department of Defense and the military Services are working hard to develop truly ready reserves. The six-months training program of the Army Reserve, the National Guard, and the Marine Corps Reserve is a major factor in developing this essential readiness.

"Laws, agencies of government, the Army, Navy, Air Force, and Marine Corps cannot, by themselves, create or maintain the Reserves we need. Their existence depends upon the American people.

maintain the Reserves we need. Their existence depends upon the American people.

"Each of our reserve components requires proper manning, equipment and training. For the new program which includes six months of active-duty-for-training, the Defense Department can provide necessary equipment and training, but young men must volunteer to participate.

"The new six-month training plan offers a particularly favorable opportunity for those young men who are between 17 and 18½ years of age to combine military training and service which our country requires with a minimum of disruption and uncertainty in their private lives.

"The young men who volunteer for this six-months training program represent our country's determination to preserve peace. They, and all who give their support to our reserve components, deserve our nation's salute."

Bradley Commission Endorses Survivor Benefits Bill, Asks Changes In COA Benefits

Strong endorsement of the Services' Survivor benefits bill (HR 7089), which has passed the House and is now awaiting action in the Senate, is given in the report of the President's Commission on Veterans' Pensions made public this week. The Commission is headed by General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, USA-Ret. USA-Ret.
The bill, the commission said, "would in large measure correct serious deficiencies in the existing situation."

Further discussing survivor benefits, the report recommended that "a more compact and simple system of survivor benefits for military personnel and veterans is essential. One that is better erans is essential. One that is better adapted to individual needs would be an advantage to the Serviceman and to the Government. . . A lump-sum payment at the time of death, with montly payments thereafter, is the best combination of benefits for survivors. In keeping with the idea that survivor nayments tion of beneats for survivors. In keeping with the idea that survivor payments represent a community sharing of the risk in a public enterprise, the monthly payments should be limited to those who were dependent upon the deceased, or who would have been dependent if he had lived."

Discussing the problems of retired personnel the report said that one of the most desirable changes would be "to coordinate the Contingency Option Act benefits with the Veterans' Administration doubt composition benefits and et tion death compensation benefits, and at the same time to eliminate the unpredictability now involved in the election of Contingency Option Act benefits. This can be done at minimum or no cost to the Government by the following:

"(1) Eliminating the present provision under the Contingency Option Act whereby military personnel who retire under disability are required to withstand greater reductions in their retirement annuity than those who are not disabled. disabled;

"(2) In cases of service-connected deaths, giving the survivors an election between the increased death compensation benefits and the Contingency Option Act benefits—but not both, as is now the case. Furthermore, the attractiveness of the Contingency Option Act program could be increased by allowing personnel who elect to do so have deductions made from their active duty pay. Sums thus accumulated would be added to their post retirement Contingency Option Act benefits, so that the reduction in their retirement annuity would be smaller.

"These adjustments would be smaller.

"These adjustments would enable both disabled and nondisabled personnel to plan with certainty as to the level of benefits which their survivors would have. They would also enable personnel electing Contingency Option Act benefits to spread the cost over part of their active duty when their earnings are greatest."

EM Clothing Costs Rise $16.05 On 1 July; WAVE Uniform Price Drops 6.9 Percent

The 10.3 per cent rise in EM clothing costs—up to $171.85 from the current $155.80 listing—results from increased wages for the Nation's apparel workers, the Navy said.

The 6.9 downward revision for enlisted women's uniforms and accessories—from $234.75 to $218.30—is being made to stimulate sales of obsolescent and long supply items. Some items will be slashed more than 50 per cent. At the same time, the Naval Aviation Cadet basic uniform and equipment price will rise 12 per cent.

the Naval Aviation Cadet basic uniform and equipment price will rise 12 per cent. The current price of $193.25 will increase $23.20 to $216.45.

These amounts are paid for the up-

If, on the other hand, he does not keep his uniforms up to snuff, he is penalized by being required to spend money out of his own pocket in any amount over his basic allowance.

Admiral McKinney noted that the Services have an additional 43,000 rental units (not designated as public quarters) which already are occupied by Service families on a rental basis with no loss in quarters allowance. However, not all of these houses are substandard. Under the terms othe bill, they would be reappraised and rented with no loss in quarters allowance only if determined to be inadequate. Families occupying those which are considered to be adequate would forfeit their entire quarters allowance. Admiral McKinney said "a large per-centage" of the units in the latter cate-gory probably would be determined inadequate.

On the men's list there are 22 price changes. Of this number, 17 are increases and five are decreases.

Of the 26 individual price changes on the women's list, 23 are upward and three downward. The biggest part of the jump in enlisted women's items is reflected in increased costs of shoes and skirts. In FY '56, a pair of dress oxford shoes cost $5.20; the new price is $10.00. A pair of dress pumps, which were $6.50, are now tagged at $12.00. The women's serge green skirt is marked up from $4.35 to $8.15.

Both enlisted men and enlisted women are granted an initial clothing allowance of $4.20 a month after their first six months of service. This allowance stands until after their third year of service when the allowance is jumped to $6.00 a month.

The enlisted man's jacket is definitely on the way out, Headquarters says. Pro-curement of this item has been discon-tinued. They will continue to be issued, however, until existing stocks are depleted.

In FY '57, enlisted men's green plastic raincoats will be introduced into the supply system. The present minimum requirement is either two green coats, or one green coat and one jacket.

ARDC Chief Points to Pyramiding Needs For Research and Development Funds

Lt. Gen. Thomas S. Power, USAF, chief of the Air Research and Development Command, stated 19 April that the United States still has the dominant position in air power and can continue to keep it "if we adhere strictly to a wellplanned and vigresearch orous research and development program."

In a speech before the Wash-ington, D. C. members of the Aviation Writers Association, Gen-eral Power said that this pro-gram must be de-signed to assure long-range maintenance of Lt. Gen. Power our technological superiority "and yet be compatible with our political and economic ideals."

General Power said the "ever-growing demands of air research and development appear to cause far greater problems in a free economy than under the iron rule of Communist dictatorship." However, he added that these problems can be met by good management, wise planning and effective administration. He

'In the Air Force, this is being achieved "In the Air Force, this is being achieved by establishing carefully selected priori-ties; by businesslike budgeting of funds, facilities and manpower; by continuous review and, when necessary, revision of program and projects; by close team-work with the best available talent in government, science and industry; and by many other practices common to suc-cessful businesses. cessful businesses.

"In spite of all this, we may become economically unable to keep up with the accelerating pace of the race for technological supremacy, unless industry is not only our partner and team-mate, but agrees to assume a far greater share of the research and development burden than it now does."

General Power said that if the military could draw, to an increasing extent, on the results of civilian-sponsored research and development, instead of other way around, "I am confident we can stay ahead in the airpower race indefinitely, without impairing the standard and stability of our economy."

General Power said the financial problem of retaining our technological su-periority is "aggravated by the rate at which technology progresses.

"It can be shown," he said, "that this progress follows a geometric curve of constantly increasing steepness, matching similar curves for the increase in the world's population, increase in the use of electric power and, in general, progress of civilization."

He added: "The increasing rate of prog-ress goes hand in hand with increasing growth of complexity and increasing efforts required to achieve equal units of

"This means," he said, "that one year's budget for research and development cannot buy an equal amount of Research and Development progress during the follow-ing year, and so on. Therefore research and development appropriations cannot remain stable but must be matched to the expanding requirements of technological progress. Unless we can see our way clear to do so, we will lose our technological superiority to the less budgethampered Soviets."

Yet to be decided, however, is a final design for the Academy Chapel. Also still up in the air are final decisions regarding construction of a proposed planetarium, which would be used as a navigational training aid. The Secretary says this building is "essential."

The Chapel, previously planned for high ground surrounding the main complex of buildings, will be moved down to be in the midst of cadet life.

Congress has authorized $125 million for construction of the new Academy, with about half for the Academy itself and the other half for support facilities in what will be a community of between 8,000 and 10,000 people—a combination college town, campus, Air Force base and major military headquarters.

Col. Albert E. Stoltz, USAF, is the Director of the Academy Construction Agency which is guiding the construction work for the 17,500 acre Academy complex.

President Eisenhower has named Maj. Gen. James E. Briggs, USAF, to succeed Lt. Gen. Hubert R. Harmon, USAF-Ret., as Superintendent of the Academy on 1 August when General Harmon, a classmate of the Chief Executive (USMA '15) will revert to the retired list.

When in full operation, the Academy will have a strength of 876 officers and 1,612 airmen in addition to the cadets.

Quick Hopping The Air Force Scene

MORE THAN 3600 PERSONS will have completed the Air Force Resources Management Program at George Washington University, Washington, D. C., with the graduation 27 April of the 31st Commanders' Class. It's a three-week course for officers and key civilians.

A FLYING CLUB IN FRANCE will be established at Laon AB. Lt. Robert Maiden, USAF, who participated in preliminary negotiations, flew a "Stump," French version of the Cub. A T-33 pilot, he said the small planes "are really hard to handle after you're used to a jet."

COL. THOMAS B. STOREY, USAF, has been appointed Director of Materiel for the Second Air Force by Maj. Gen. Frank A. Armstrong, jr., USAF, Commander.

GENERAL NATHAN F. TWINING, USAF Chief of Staff, took the occasion of an address on 25 April at Shreveport, La., to assert that the Intercontinental Ballistic Missile "will be a tremendously important weapon, but it will be a long time until it is reliable enough to replace other weapons systems, and much longer until it can match all the capabilities of the airplane." He said "it is perfectly true to state that there is no known defense against a ballistic missile," but added immediately that "it is equally true that there is no known ballistic missile in the inventory of any armed force." The general predicted that "when the time comes that one or both sides have effective, dependable, accurate ballistic missiles, the period in which there will be no defense will be either very short or non-existent . . . I am certain that an anti-ICBM will be built."

a hostile power were to perfect a reliable ICBM before we do, the deterrent effect of our atomic airpower would be still effective." In this regard, he said that "adding to our present effectiveness during the ICBM time period, could be the atomic-powered bomber. Theoretically it would be possible for us to maintain a fleet of nuclear-powered bombers airborne and invulnerable to ballistic missile attack. The unlimited endurance and range of such bombers would make it possible for us to keep them positioned all around a potential aggressor—ready to retaliate the instant a missile were launched in our direction."

NEWLY RELEASED STATISTICS show that the Air Force began this year with 24,106 Regular officers of whom 43.8 per cent were serving in permanent grade. Just over half—51.4 per cent—were one grade higher; 4.7 per cent were two grades higher and .1 per cent were three grades above the permanent designation. Two officers were four grades higher. The breakdown of the permanent promotion list in the new Register shows 69 major generals, 79 brigadier generals, 1600 colonels, 4097 lieutenant colonels, 5023 majors, 7791 captains, 4155 first lieutenants and 1292 second lieutenants.

EFFECTIVE 15 MAY, Air Force personnel assigned to Johnston AFB in the Pacific will be restricted to 2000 pounds of household goods.

This is the first FEAF location to be placed under the 2000-pound order, already in effect in the Panama Canal Zone, Alaskan Air Command, Iceland and Germany.

USAFE Spends $500 Mil. To Aid Trailer Dwellers

U. S. Air Forces in Europe will spend $500,000 on the construction of adjacent rooms and patios for its 2,689 family house trailers.

Air Force owned and operated house trailers are located at 16 Air Force bases in France, North Africa, the United Kingdom and the Middle East.

Each trailer will be provided with a standardized 100-square foot adjacent room and an equal size patio with roof.

Since the $500,000 will not cover the entire cost of the additions, trailer occupants will be provided with surplus construction material to complete the work.

FAMILY DRUG STORES IN WIESBADEN

Pharmaceutical shops in the Out-patient Clinic of the USAF Hospital and the dispensaries at Lindsey and Wiesbaden Air Bases in Germany have been established to provide household remedies for all personnel authorized medical care.

Limited quantities of the remedies may be obtained without consulting a physician or presenting a prescription. No more than three items will be dispensed at one time, and all drugs must be signed for.

Col. John Boysen Cited For Industrial Medicine

Col. John E. Boysen, USAF-MC, deputy surgeon at Headquarters, AMC, this week was presented a fellowship in the Industrial Medical Association at its annual business meeting in Philadelphia.

Colonel Boysen was honored for his outstanding work in the field of industrial medicine. He was responsible for the organization of the USAF Residency Program in Occupational Medicine at AMC Hqs. following recognition of the new specialty by the American Medical Association.

RCA Develops New Camera for ARDC

A camera which does away with much of the guess work in photographing missiles has been developed by RCA Optics Engineering Laboratory for the Air Research and Development Command.

The Full Sky Recording Camera, which utilizes the Beattie Varitron pulse camera, furnishes information about the variations in atmospheric transmission, the proper filters to use due to conditions created by salt and dust particles in the air, and how the turbulence in the upper air affects resolution, known as ground boil. The camera is nicknamed the "crystal ball."

Lt. Gen. Thomas S. Power, USAF, commander of the Air Research and Development Command, made a telling point in his talk to the Aviation Writers Association when he brought out the fact that properly conducted research programs bring increasingly greater results as they go along and consequently their costs tend to increase. This means, he said, that one year's budget for research and development cannot buy an equal amount of R&D progress during the following year, and so on. (See Page 8.)

Research appropriations cannot remain stable. but must be matched to the expanding requirements of technological progress, he declared. "Unless we can see our way clear to do so, we will lose our technological superiority to the less budget-hampered Soviets."

We recall that last year Mr. George F. Metcalf of the General Electric Company made a report to the American Ordnance Association on a long and detailed study GE had conducted using its technical experts and processing all available data through electronic computers. One important lesson of that study was that basic, new knowledge is acquired and used at a constantly accelerating rate to establish new services and products. The developments in each ten year period contribute about twice as much as those in the preceding decade. Mr. Metcalf also predicted that a third of the electronic products available in the next ten years will result from technology unknown today. "It follows," he said, "that the weapons of the next decade will be born from technology unsuspected, and unknown to us today." To attain these results, likewise, will require increasingly greater expenditures for research.

While General Power was speaking only of aviation and Mr. Metcalf primarily of electronics, the same laws of pyramiding costs and results apply to all phases of research. It is particularly vital that R&D programs for all components of the defense team be kept growing and healthy. They are truly the seeds from which our future National Security will grow.

Rumble In The Mountains. In the face of the probing and most proper Senate inquiry into the relative strength of U.S. and Soviet airpower, the Nation has been reassured by the Defense Department action in taking the wraps off some recent achievements. Thus, in a single week, newsmen were allowed to see and write about Lockheed's spectacular 1300-1400 mile per hour F-104A Starfighter, the world's fastest combat plane, and to witness awesome rocket engine tests at the hitherto secret Air Force-North American Propulsion Field Laboratory in California. (THE JOURNAL 21 April.)

This Laboratory, spread over hundreds of acres in the remote bowls and valleys of the Santa Susanna Mountains about 35 miles northwest of Los Angeles, is operated by Rocketdyne, a division of North American Aviation, Inc., whose job it is to design, build and test rocket engines for missiles.

Understandably, the Defense Department decided to lift only partially the curtain of secrecy that surrounds the 24-hour work at the rocket engine Laboratory, largest test facility of its type in the Western Hemisphere. Newsmen who attended the test firings would have liked additional details concerning thrust ratings of engines that are being tested at the remote site 1800 feet above the San Fernando Valley. Such data was withheld, however, but all who saw and heard the rocket engines being put through their flendish test paces were convinced that mighty developments would be proved out at the Laboratory. This will mean better missiles that will travel farther and faster with ever-increasing accuracy. The great rumble heard in the mounARMY · NAVY · AIR FORCE

Volunteer Welfare Work. The reports of Service wives' activities abroad made to the American Red Cross at its recent annual conference in Washington, D. C., (see page 22, last week's Journal) were glowing tributes to the vast amount of helpful, volunteer work done by these devoted women. Every so often some returning visitor or newspaper columnist brings back disparaging tales of frivolous conduct in overseas areas, but the fact is that these Service families do an enormous amount of charity and welfare work and by their conduct are a valuable adjunct to American diplomacy in building up genuine good will toward this nation among the peoples of our Allies.

The Red Cross conference was told that there are 4,000 regular volunteers from Service families in the European, North African and Middle East areas, plus another 6,000 who do such work on a less regular basis. In the Far East there are more than 2,000 regular volunteer workers. Little understood is the fact that many of these volunteer duties, such as hospital and clinical work, require considerable training, so that these women must take intensive study courses before even embarking on their work. The amount of time American Service wives devote to such training and work is prodigious.

The fact is that the personnel of the Services and their families-men, women and childrencontribute an enormous amount to the community life wherever they are stationed. (THE JOURNAL'S "People of Service" department reports these activities each week.) Not only do they give of their time and effort but they give generously of their money. Service installations always make their quotas on fund drives and quite often exceed them by good percentages.

10 Years Ago-A return to barracks life and more exercise on the drill field were ordered by General Joseph T. McNarney this week to check what he described as a deterioration of discipline among European troops. The crackdown was ordered because "discipline in certain localities and commands in this theater has deteri-orated to the point of discrediting the fine performance of our troops in general."

50 Years Ago-The great fortifications at the entrance to the Golden Gate were seriously injured by the earth-quake. The full extent of the injury sustained by the great works is as yet unknown, for nothing but a survey by the Engineering Corps can disclose the full extent of the damage. At Lime Point the emplacements of the big guns have been cracked and twisted.

90 Years Ago-We have got to the last act, apparently, of the French drama in Mexico. What remains of the plot is not, possibly, difficult of prophecy, since the de-nouement has just been reached. The only question is as how long it will take the strolling Thespians to hurry through the final scenes, play the play out to its igno-ble conclusion, and leave the walking gentleman, H. S. H. Maximillian, to speak the epilogue.

Doctors Deserve Tops

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

I have just read with disgust the I have just read with disgust the letter from "Indignant MSC Wife." The medical profession is one which is dedicated to all of mankind. No right thinking person can say that anyone who saves his life, or extends it for any period of time, is adequately rewarded. This is so true that every place in the western world recognizes the doctor as a leader in the community.

Doctors do not claim to be starving, but the nature of their services entitle them to more than a mere living wage. Even PFCs with families as large as "Indignant's" are not starving.

To cheer up those who are envious of the good fortune of others, let me point out the misfortune of many members of my own profession. After hard long years of school many members of the legal profession cannot obtain commissions and must serve as enlisted men. Many of us have families as large, if not larger, than "Indignant's". Promotion wise we are fortunate if we make E-4 by the completion of our two years. Very few of us have duties which allow us to make use of our legal training. Many of us have to borrow money to keep our families together and then upon release from active duty have the first two lean years in practice ahead of us. Yet, as a whole, we do not complain. We are grateful to the draft board which allowed us to complete school and honored t trained to defend our country.

The primary service the military owes to the country is the defense of the country. The medical profession has no desire to compete with other professions. The people of this country and the Department of Army has recognized the superiority of and our dependence upon the medi-cal profession for the defense and health of our nation.

WHY PAY RAISES FOR DOCTORS and none for officers in other special-ized roles in the Armed Forces? This question was answered by Chairman Richard B. Russell (D-Ga.), of the Senate Armed Services Committee during debate on the Medical Career Incentives Bill. He told the Senate, "The question might be raised—and it is one which is worthy of consideration should be singled out of all the various snould be singled out of all the various categories of officers in the armed services for substantially increased compensation. There is a very simple answer to the question. We have called to the colors approximately three million young Americans. Every Member of Congress has a direct responsibility to make certain that they and their dependents are afforded medical care; and such a measure as this is absolute-ly necessary in order to meet the problem of securing adequate medical and dental aid for the men in the armed services and their dependents.

"It so happens that the medical and dental officers more than any other military group, are affected by conditions in the civilian medical and dental economy. This country does not have military medical schools. For their source of graduates in medicine and dentistry, therefore, the military services are dependent on the limited output of our civilian medical schools. output of our civilian medical schools.

Moreover, the practice of medicine and dentistry is basically no different in military life than it is in civilian life, with the result that it is no great problem for a medical officer to resign and make the transition to a civilian practice." He noted that in the Army alone during the past two fiscal years, of those eligible to resign, 75 percent of the captains resigned, 66 percent of the majors, 24 percent of the lieutenant colonels and even two percent of the colonels.

THE COMING NUCLEAR DET-ONATION at the Eniwetok Proving Ground in the Pacific will be "the most devastating explosion ever known to mankind," Congressman James T. Patterson (R-Conn.), predicts. A member of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, Congressman Patterson will accompany the joint task force to be an eye-witness to the explosion. He said he is unable to disclose any official information about the tests but he predicts that the explosion sched-uled for about 1 May "will surpass in power any nuclear detonation thus

THERE'S GROWING SUPPORT in the Congress for a proposal to set aside the 30th of May as a day for the Nation to pay its respects to the four living survivors of the Civil War. The step, first proposed in the House, has been taken up in the Senate by Sena-tors Paul Douglas (D-Ill.), and Lister whom is over 100 years old—include three veterans of the Confederate Army (William A. Lundy, Laurel Hill, Fla; John Salling, Slant, Va.; Walter M. Williams, Franklin, Tex.), and one Union Army veteran (Albert Woolson, Duluth, Minn.). Senator Douglas told the Senate that the four men "represent the final remnant of the millions of Americans who, almost a century ago, served in these great armies out of a deep sense of duty and conviction of the rightness of their causes."

THREE-YEAR EXTENSION of the GI home loan program has been proposed by Senator Alexander Wiley (R-Wisc.), "to assure justice for the millions of veterans who have not yet" taken advantage of the program. The Senator estimated that more than 11 million WWII veterans have not yet used their GI loans.

HUNTING AND FISHING RE-STRICTIONS on military bases are contained in legislation introduced by Senator Dennis Chavez (D-N.M.). The Senator's bill provides that on Federal Senator's Dil provides that on Federal lands the fish, game and trapping laws of the particular State shall apply. This would mean that Armed Forces personnel stationed at Fort Belvoir, for example, would have to buy Virginia fishing licences to fish in streams located on the Fort in streams located on the Fort.

ELIMINATION OF THE RANK-STRUCTURE FEATURE of the Survivor Benefits bill is urged by Rep. John P. Saylor (D-Pa.). He told the House recently that he is "convinced that a life given for one's country is a life, whether the individual be a general or a private." He said he does "not object to increasing benefits to widows and children of men who make the supreme sacrifice," but he strenu-ously objects "to any system that would create a wide disparity between would create a wide disparity between benefits given families of high-ranking officers and next-of-kin of privates, airmen and seamen." As written, the Survivor bill provides widows' compensation of $112 per month, plus 12 per cent of the basic pay of the deceased member. Congressman Saylor said he hopes the Senate Finance Committee, which is due to begin consideration of the bill next month, "will strike this philosophy from the bill."

$149 MILLION IS MISSING. The Senate Preparedness Investigation Subcommittee issued a report this week in which it said that $265 million week in which it said that $265 million spent by the Navy on its Demon F3H fighter plane was a "total loss." Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas only a short time before had told a House Appropriation subcommittee that the Navy lost only $116 million on the deal. The Preparedness committee, headed by Senate Majority Leader Lyndon B. Johnson (D-Tex.), said the Navy actually spent "at least $300 million" in the development of the plane and its engine and that $265 million went down the drain "because of over went down the drain "because of over optimistic estimates of the time required to design, build and test the engine." The "only return" from the investment was in "lessons learned" the Senate group said. The committee said "So far six aircraft of the F3H-2 series have been delivered to the NAVAL AND MARINE CORPS AVIATION have been brought into the fold of the Symington Subcommittee investigation of national airpower and guided missiles. Because of complaints that no picture of U. S. strategic air strength would be com-plete unless Navy and Marine Corps fighters and bombers were included in the study, the Senate group decided to enlarge the scope of its inquiry. This week the subcommittee was closeted again with CIA Director Al-len Dulles to learn more about the aerial might of the Soviet Union. aerial might of the Soviet Union. Earlier, the group heard General Carl A. Spaatz, USAF-Ret., and Admiral Robert B. Carney, USN-Ret. The next witnesses to be called in open session will be top Pentagon officials. General Curtis LeMay, SAC Commander, was giving testimony behind closed doors as The Journal went to press.

MEMO For Journal Readers

- Pentagon officials a platform to sound off in support of increased career incentives—notably a new pay adjustment. No assessment of the nation's military air strength will be complete unless close attention is given to the problem of retaining skilled manpower. Air Force chiefs, though previously in agreement to wait until next year to press for increased monetary incentives, now may find in questions put by Senator Symington's Committee an opportunity to accelerate pay raise proposals. Related issues, such as commissary and PX prices, are likely to be called to the Senators' attention.
- WATCH FOR MORE PENTAGON CHIEFS to warn earnestly against being taken in by Soviet sweetness and smiles. Air Force Sec'y. Quarles said in a speech this week that "the grave danger in the present situation . . . is that the talk of peace and the friendly smiles from behind the Iron Curtain may delude us into a sense of security that will result in a relaxation of our defense measures and a deterioration of our relative position to the point where terms can be forced upon us." Mr. Quarles, urging continuation of a "cautious although earnest approach" to reduce armaments, emphasized that because of new weapons "treachery can now pay an unprecedented premium to those who practice it against disarmament agreements." THE SECRETARY'S ATTITUDE was reenforced with reports from England telling of boasts made by Nikita S. Khrushchev about a Soviet guided missile with a hydrogen bomb warhead.
- together in earnest to plan athletic schedules for 1958 and beyond, taking into account the expanding sports program at the new USAF Academy. Need for early action is particularly important in football. So far, there has been "all kinds of light talk," but no firm decisions, according to Air Force Sec'y. Quarles. There will be stiff competition among a number of cities to land Service Academy games; for example, Chicago will certainly contend that with the Army-Navy Game in the East, other Academy contests should be shifted elsewhere—specifically to the Windy City.
- DROP THE PENNIES and save some dollars. That's a decision of the Air Force Comptroller. He has proposed dropping the pennies and the decimal point preceding them on all status of allocation reports made to the Pentagon, except for yearend reports. Money will be saved in the submission of wire or radio fund reports messages as a result of the penny cut.
- A SCALED DOWN PROBLEM is causing the Air Force some concern—a problem that was pointed up with last week's unveiling of the F-104A. Toy manufacturers who make model kits complain that security rules deny them access to blueprint material, resulting in long delays in bringing new aircraft onto store counters throughout the nation. Some Air Force officials, anxious to promote enthusiasm for airpower among the nation's youth in every way possible, would like to help the toy manufacturers. The Air Force people say it would be a fine thing if model kits of planes like the F-104 could come out simultaneously with the first public showing of the aircraft, or shortly thereafter.

- SEC DEF WILSON MAY DECIDE to reveal earlier than had been previously planned that the Lockheed F-104 Starfighter has outdistanced considerably the speed record of 1132 miles per hour now held by Britain's Fairey Delta II. The Secretary could do this without reporting exact speeds attained by the F-104. He will be under considerable pressure to make such a public disclosure in view of the current Congressional hearings looking into comparative status of U.S. military airpower with that of other nations.

 SO DON'T BE SURPRISED if Mr. Wilson uses the occasion of a near future address—possibly in connection with Armed Forces Day—to reassert U.S. airspeed supremacy.
- AF SEC'Y. QUARLES MISFIRED with his terminology in explaining to Pentagon newsmen about the layout of the new Air Force Academy on 23 April (Page 9). The former WWI Army field artillery captain, obviously enthused over progress of the new Academy, referred several times to the location of the "messhall." He had lost sight temporarily of the Air Force's morale-building desire to identify such structures as "dining halls." In any case, the Secretary seemed delighted that there would be most pleasant surroundings in which to mess and/or dine.
- GENERAL O. P. WEYLAND, USAF, head of the Tactical Air Command, has won a campaign to provide two-seat versions of fighter aircraft assigned to his force. The Air Force has just placed an initial order of $15 million with Lockheed Aircraft Corp. for the first two-seat F-104 Starfighters. General Weyland has convinced his superiors of the need for the two-place aircraft for training purposes, as well as for combat requirements.
- GENERAL DAVID SARNOFF, USAR-Ret., this week pointed indirectly to the need for a close working relationship between the Services and Civil Defense officials. Stressing the need for adequate Reserve Forces (see Page 35), the businessman-soldier told how Reservists "would prove most valuable" in Civil Defense jobs the first few days after outbreak of hostilities. Up to now, there's been little mention of this Reserve manpower utilization. Many details need to be worked out—for example, who would issue the call to duty?
- ARMY SEC'Y. BRUCKER'S SKILL in winning Pentagon inter-Service wrangles is demonstrated anew with DoD's decision to give the Army responsibility for its own aviation training, including courses now conducted by the Ar Force. As a result, the Army takes over Gary AFB, Tex., and Wolters AFB, Tex., the former to be used for primary fixed wing pilot training, the latter for primary cargo helicopter pilot training—both by civilian contractors. THE AIR FORCE HAD CONTENDED that it should continue to give flying training courses to Army airmen, but Mr. Brucker argued differently and won.
- WHAT'S IN A WING? The outgoing B-36 Peacemaker bomber, which made its first flight 10 years ago come August, has a wing that is 7½ feet thick. That's the length from fuselage to tip of the wing on the F-104A; the Starfighter wing is so thin that a felt covering is used on the leading edge to protect ground crewmen.

NORTH AMERICAN HAS BUILT MORE AIRPLANES

JET POWER TODAY

The Navy's new FJ-4 FURY Jet Fighter is now undergoing its carrier trials. Newest in the FURY family of carrier-based jets, the FJ-4 climbs faster . . . maneuvers at higher altitudes, with longer range. This new and faster FURY is a product of North American's Columbus Division -a completely integrated aircraft engineering and production center where even faster, more potent aircraft are in continuing development. North American Aviation is a prime supplier of advanced aircraft to the Department of Defense.

WORLD THE OTHER COMPANY IN ANY THAN

SPACE POWER TOMORROW The SM-64 NAVAHO Intercontinental Guided Missile is a logical partner of our continuing development of supersonic, piloted aircraft. Security restrictions prohibit any details - but we can say that the NAVAHO will fly great distances at speeds far beyond supersonic. It will be guided and flown by automatic controls, driven by high-thrust rocket power. The NAVAHO extends the striking power and long-range defense of our nation farther than ever before.

AMF Air Traffic Device Developed For Army

The Boston Electronics Division of American Machine & Foundry Company American Machine & Foundry Company has developed, under contract to the Army Signal Corps, a special cathode ray tube display facility for presenting information pertaining to an aircraft traffic situation. Essentially, the equipment is the electronic equivalent of existing manually operated plotting heards which manually operated plotting boards which are becoming less effective as aircraft speeds increase.

The Electronic Display Equipment is basically a Plan Position Indicator for a trace-while-scan surveillance radar system. Each aircraft under surveillance is displayed as a coded symbol centered at the aircraft's plan position coordinates. The symbol consists of a dot marking the location of the aircraft; a velocity vector originating at the target dot to in-dicate the heading and approximate speed of the aircraft; a three-digit number for identification purposes; and an array of coded dots for presenting other pertinent data.

Position and velocity data may be derived from the basic track-while-scan radar system. Identification number and other pertinent data, height information for instance, may be inserted manually or automatically, although the equip-ment is presently designed to operate with a system capable of providing such data automatically. U. S. COAST GUARD

Secretary of The Treasury—George M. Humphrey Commandant—Vice Adm. Alfred C. Richmond

NEW penalties for pass-overs have been incorporated into the Coast Guard's Personnel Manual.

The amendment is expected to be dis-ibuted in the near future.

The following is the substance of the newly approved changes: Officers who are not found qualified for promotion by a second board under terms of Articles 5-A-3 (b) and 5-A-4 (b) are out of line for advancement for a year. This applies to officers being considered for permanent or temporary promotion in all ranks from ensign through captain.

Near the end of the one-year period these cases are considered by a third board. If the third board finds an officer not qualified, he is permanently out of line for promotion, and, if serving in a temporary rank, is reverted to his permanent grade.

If the third board recommends promotion, then, upon temporary promotion, the officer receives a date of rank as of the date he is advanced.

Upon permanent promotion following action by the third board, the officer receives the date of rank of the last officer who was permanently promoted to that rank. In other words, any officer who is promoted as a result of favorable action the third board will have lost numbers on the lineal list equivalent to the number of officers who were promoted dur-ing the time he was out of line for advancement.

House OK's School Plan For Surviving Children

Free college educations for approximately 100,000 children of military men who have died or who die of a disease or injury incurred in World War II or the Korean conflict have been approved by the House.

The legislation (HR 9824) authorizes

36 months of education and training for each child in an approved educational institution.

Those who go to school under the program will receive $110 per month for full-time training and proportionately lesser amounts for part-time training.

Those who are eligible may begin training upon the completion or termination of high school education or at the age of 18. The training period terminates at the age of 23.

Air Development Squadron Six, based at Naval Air Test Center, NAS Patuxent River, Md., is getting set for a permanent shift to Quonset Point, R. I.

The move affects 48 officers and 263 enlisted men. VX-6's Commanding Officer, Cdr. George K. Ebbe, USN, states that no official reason was given for the move, but that he believed the shift was being made to relieve overcrowded conditions at the Station.

VX-6 played a large part in "Operation Deepfreeze" preparing for United States participation in the International Geo-physical Year exploration of the Ant-

A total of 61 officers and men are en route from the South Pole to the States and are expected to be back in time to make the move with VX-6. The transfer is scheduled to begin on 27 May.

Arsenal Cited For Safety

For the first time in its history, the 35th Annual Massachusetts Safety Conference in Boston honored a military installation and its commanding officer for outstanding contribution to safety.

A safety plaque was presented to Col. Alden P. Taber, USA, commanding officer of the Watertown Arsenal, for his efforts and the efforts of the arsenal employees in setting a low lost-time accident and safety record for 1955. The method for decreasing arsenal accidents was outlined in a speech by Colonel Taber at the safety conference a year ago. Army Navy Air Force Journal 28 Apr. 1956 (Vol. 93, P. 1093)

General McAuliffe Prepares To End Distinguished 37 Year Military Career

By GENERAL ANTHONY C. McAULIFFE, USA, C-In-C, USAREUR

AFTER 2½ years with America's peacetime Army in Europe, I soon shall return to the United States to tershail return to the United States to ter-minate a military career that has ex-tended over 37 years. I shall leave behind me in Europe the most combat-ready Army in our history. It is an army on 24-hour guard duty along a 435-mile frontier in Western Germany. It is a hard-hitting, highly mobile force. It exists to deter aggression. Its mission, in event of attack, is to help defend Western Europe.

ern Europe.

The quarter million soldiers of the U. S. Army in Europe are ready, day or night, to carry out their assignment. Their tanks and other combat vehicles are gassed up and ready to roll. Ammunition racks in every fighting machine are full. Every weapon is cleaned and oiled. Field packs are neatly rolled. And these troops have demonstrated time and again that they can strated time and again that they can take to the field ready to fight on short

American soldiers spend at These American soldiers spend at least half their time in the field, keeping in fighting trim through realistic combat training. Frequent practice alerts, called without warning at any hour of the day or night, have become almost routine and guarantee that nothing will surprise them. These soldiers are in excellent physical condition, skilled in the use of their modern weapons, and keenly aware of the imweapons, and keenly aware of the im-portance of their tasks. They can cripple the best-prepared aggressors.

Mobility For Atomic Warfare

In the course of developing this mag-nificent fighting team, it was realized that a modern army which might have to fight on an atomic or non-atomic battlefield must have great mobility. Only fast-moving combat units can deombat units can defend against exploitation of atomic attack. Only fast-moving combat units can exploit an atomic breakthrough. Because of this need for mobility, the U.S. Army in Europe already has had an infantry division replaced with an airborne division. Soon another armored division will replace a homeward-bound infantry division. This will give us two armored, one airborne and two infantry divisions plus three armored cavalry regiments.

Adding to combat effectiveness has Adding to compare electiveness has been the smooth functioning of Operation Gyroscope, the replacement of personnel on a unit rather than an individual basis. Prior to Gyroscope there was a 50% annual turnover of personnel. It was normal for an instructor, in a map-reading class for example, to find among his students some who had served here 16 months, some 8 months and some who had just arrived. Conand some who had just arrived. Continuity of instruction and training was difficult, almost impossible. Under Gyroscope all personnel arrive and presumably will leave at about the same time, so that units can carry on a progressive program with the same personnel over an 18-month period.

Complicated Negotiations

The buildup has not been easy. Many problems have inevitably evolved in working out agreements with our host nations concerning Army activities. In fact, from our extensive dealings with the allied governments we have had almost as much training in diplomacy as in military operations. When we want to practice firing one of our long-range weapons, we often discuss it at length with everyone from the town mayor to the farmer whose property we want to the farmer whose property we want to use for a few hours as a firing position. Only after these talks are completed can we aim the weapon toward our allocated target area and fire. When some minor property damage occurs in a maneuver, the resulting negotiations can be as complicated as a peace conference.

In general, however, relations with our hosts have been cooperative and friendly. For one thing, they know our strength is their security, and the respect won by U. S. Forces in Europe is bolstered by our support of community activities, our help in construction projects, and our aid in dozens of local emergencies.

There was little excitement among the German people on 5 May last year when they obtained their sovereignty. Our occupation had been without vengeance, and the Germans found virtually nothing changed after that day. Their understanding of our role as a defensive bulwark rather than an occupying army has been heartening.

But the Army felt the difference. Occupation cost funds had paid for our housing construction in Germany, and for a number of services and improvements. When we realized these funds would be gradually reduced and possibly eliminated, we began tightening our belts. Faced with the choice between lowering our standard of liv-ing or our combat potential, we saw the need for living somewhat less com-

As we tighten our belt in Germany, we are trying to get to the point in France where we can loosen it a bit. Lack of adequate housing and other facilities there has been one of our biggest problems. Progress in correcting this has been slow, but with sevbiggest problems. Progress in correcting this has been slow, but with several construction projects planned recently we expect steadily to replace substandard housing with modern dwelling units. Despite conditions in France, traditional American optimism and good humor have been displayed at their best by our people stationed there, and they soon will see improvements take shape.

The morale of our troops is high. A

The morale of our troops is high. A glance at the reenlistment rate in Europe shows a continuing rise in the number of enlisted men who choose to stay in the Army. Operation Gyro-scope and the concurrent travel program have been responsible in part for the morale level, and off-duty programs of athletics, education, touring and other opportunities have all helped to maintain the spirit we need to remain

Aggression Would Be Costly

We believe we have added to the hard core of the NATO force with our revitalized American contribution. But we do not delude ourselves into thinking that with our present strength we could stop an all-out assault by an aggressor even though we would make an act of aggression an extremely costly thing. NATO power, drained by recent trouble in North Africa and the Middle East, must be restored. The addition to NATO of the new German Army, which already is in training with U. S. Army assistance, will be an important ontribution to the defense of Western Europe.

I have considered it an honor to inherit command of and to serve with the fine fighting team we have in Europe. The challenging tasks I have faced as Commander in Chief, U. S. Army, Europe, could not have been accomplished without the outstanding support of all personnel, from my superiors the Pentagon through my comin the Pentagon, through my com-manders and staff officers, down to the line private. I shall watch the future activity of the Army in Europe with confidence, and with pride in having been a part of it.

"Clock Has Struck Twelve," Gen. Sarnoff Says In Key Reserve Week Address

RIG. Gen. David Sarnoff, USAR-Ret., speaking as Chairman of the National Security Training Commission, has called for a nation-wide effort to acquaint the youth of the United States with the importance and experiments. and opportunities of service in the Re-

He told a Military Reserve Week Luncheon at the Shoreham Hotel in Washington, D. C., on 23 April that "the clock of history has struck twelve for those Cinderella fairy-tale thinkers who would have us prepare our defenses only after an enemy has attacked.

"In the present era," said the Chairman of the Radio Corporation of America, "we must have strength in Reserve if we are to survive as a free nation—or indeed, if we are to survive at all."

General Sarnoff said his Commission is receiving "the fullest measure of cooperation" from the Defense Department, but he noted that sufficient numbers of men between 17 and 18½ are not yet volunteering for the Six-Month Training Program.

This program is seen as being critical to the success of the over-all Reserve buildup.

General Sarnoff said "the important thing is to get 165-million Americans to realize that the Reserves are vital to the security of our nation—which means the security of each one of us."

He said that the following advan-tages of the Program should be emphasized:

- "It gives the young man himself a chance to plan realistically for his future without worrying about when he will be drafted—and at the same time, to fulfill his legal obligation and patriotic duty.
- "It gives his family the assurance that he will be away from home for only six months instead of the two years required under the draft—and that he will not be called away for his training until he leaves high school.
- "It gives his home town a trained leader capable of helping in time of emergency, and capable, too, of making a real contribution to the labor force. The technical skills a young man learns in the service will help him get a job when he is ready and advance his presents for proportion. advance his prospects for promotion.
- "It gives his country a chance to fill out its Active and Reserve strength and to maintain the necessary stability of forces."

General Sarnoff was in Washington again on 25 April when he appeared before the Research and Development Subcommittee of the Joint Committee on Atomic Energy, to present his views on the current shortage of scientific and engineering manpower in this country. General Sarnoff has been active in urging that prompt measures active in urging that prompt measures be taken by industry and others to help relieve the present shortage. He is the author of a plan for a National Education Reserve to provide schools with science teachers from industry to meet immediate needs.

Congressman Melvin Price (D-III), Chairman of the Subcommittee on Research and Development, said that testimony before the subcommittee

Research and Development, said that testimony before the subcommittee last week by experts in the manpower field underlined the view that a "dangerous shortage" of scientific and engineering talent exists and that vigorous action must be taken to assure that future requirements are met. He emphasized, in this regard, that the shortage is particularly acute in the atomic energy field and acute in the atomic energy field and referred to a statement by AEC Com-missioner Willard F. Libby that only 25% of the replacements presently being sought are available to meet the demand.

"New, Progressive, Imaginative Navy" More Important Than Ever, DCNO Says

Today's modern Navy is "new, progressive, imaginative" and is more important to our defense than ever before, VAdm. Thomas S. Combs, USN, Deputy Chief of Naval Operations (Air) told members of the Aero Club of Washington 24 April in Washington 29. Washington, D. C.

No enemy, Admiral Combs declared, can afford to attack the United States while a Naval striking force with our retaliatory power is roaming the high seas unopposed. The extensive search effort required to locate such a force preliminary to attack is a dead giveaway of the enemy's warlike intentions, Ad-miral Combs declared in support of his contention that a strong Navy reduces the possibility of surprise attack.

Discussing new Navy developments in the field of aeronautics, Admiral Combs described the Douglas Aircraft Company's new "ejectable cockpit capsule" (see page 30 last week's Journal). Such a cockpit, he said, not only could be used to save the pilot in emergencies but would be interchangeable with other aircraft, could be used as a briefing trainer, and "in the near future" it may be used for atomic aircraft because it can be re-moved and stored separately from the power plant to avoid possible contamination.

Discusses SeaMaster

He also discussed the Martin P6M SeaMaster which type of plane, he said, "seems ideally suited for eventual nu-clear propulsion, due to its size and conclear propulsion, due to its size and configuration, combined with the practically unlimited take off and landing areas water provides; nuclear power would eliminate the fuel problem and then its capabilities appear almost limitles."

Thousands of Regular retired officers currently are barred from Government jobs by a law which went on the statute books 62 years ago. Other thousands (both Regular and Reserve) are prevented under a recently amended 1932 law from earning a combined total of more than $10,000 from retired pay and Government employment.

Chairman Kilday said "many unfair situations have developed" from the operation of these laws. He thinks his group "should give serious consideration to writing legislation which would im-pose a strict statute of limitations on claims by the Government" against indi-viduals who have received or are receiving dual compensation in violation of the law.

Many such individuals are hired by Government agencies, he said, and years later told that they were paid without proper sanction and must return thou-sands of dollars to the Government.

He thinks "there is room for considerable improvement" in both the 1894 law and the 1932 law and he said the committee "should ascertain whether they have outlived their usefulness or whether we should retain some limitations but without the severe restrictions that are imposed by the law today."

Mr. Kilday said he realizes "that there may well be a fear on the part of many that the employment of retired officers might go unchecked if some reasonable restrictions were not imposed upon their

Secretary Pratt told the subcommittee there are currently more than 35 stat-utes which deal with the subject of dual compensation and dual employment.
